Step 2: Cut Fabric Circles

From each fabric scrap, cut out two circles of different sizes. For example, you could cut one circle with a 3-inch diameter and the other with a 2-inch diameter. The smaller circle will form the inner petals, while the larger circle will form the outer petals.

Step 3: Fold Fabric Circles

Fold each fabric circle in half and then in half again. This will create a cone shape. Using the needle and thread, stitch the cone-shaped edges together, leaving a small opening at the top.

Step 4: Create the Inner Petals

Push the fabric through the opening at the top of the smaller cone. Gently shape the fabric to create the inner petals. You can use your fingers or a small tool to manipulate the fabric into your desired shape.

Step 5: Make the Outer Petals

Repeat Step 4 with the larger cone to create the outer petals. Push the fabric through the opening and shape the petals. Overlap the outer petals leggermente over the inner petals to create a fuller, more realistic bloom.

Step 6: Attach the Petals

Using needle and thread or fabric glue, secure the inner petals to the outer petals. Stitch or glue around the base of the flower, connecting the two layers of fabric.

Step 7: Create the Flower Stem

Cut a piece of floral wire to your desired length for the flower stem. Wrap the base of the wire tightly around the base of the fabric flower. If desired, use floral tape to cover the wire stem and create a more polished look.

Step 8: Finishing Touches

Optionally, you can add additional embellishments to your double petal fabric flower. For instance, you could stitch on beads or sequins for added sparkle or wrap the base of the flower in ribbon or lace for an elegant touch.

Congratulations on creating your very own double petal fabric flower! With a little practice, you can master the technique and craft a variety of exquisite fabric flowers to enhance any project. Experiment with different fabrics, colors, and sizes to create unique and captivating floral masterpieces.
