The symphony was composed in 1808 and first performed in Vienna in 1809. It is one of Beethoven's most popular and frequently performed symphonies, and is known for its bright and cheerful character. The work is scored for a full orchestra, including woodwinds, brass, timpani, and strings.

The first movement, Allegro ma non troppo, begins with a lively and energetic theme in the strings. The development section is full of dramatic contrasts, and the movement ends with a triumphant coda.

The second movement, Andante con moto, is a lyrical and expressive movement in the key of A minor. The main theme is introduced by the cellos and bassoons, and is later taken up by the violins. The movement ends with a peaceful and serene coda.

The third movement, Scherzo: Allegro, is a lively and playful movement in the key of C minor. The main theme is introduced by the violins and violas, and is later taken up by the woodwinds and brass. The movement ends with a vigorous and energetic coda.

The fourth movement, Finale: Allegro, is a joyous and triumphant movement in the key of C major. The main theme is introduced by the strings, and is later taken up by the woodwinds and brass. The movement ends with a brilliant and festive coda.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 60 is a masterpiece of the classical repertoire. It is a work that is full of energy, vitality, and joy. The Beethoven's Werke Series full score is an essential resource for anyone who wants to study or perform this great symphony.
